"Rocks" Recipe Sent by Reader

Washington Times,

Washington, D. C.; I quoted recently a request in The Times for a recipe for making "Rocks."

Here it is:
One cup butter, one and one-half cups of granulated sugar, three eggs, one teaspoonful cinnamon, one and one-half teaspoonful of allspice, one pound bhopped dates, one and one-half cups of hickory or walnuts coarsely chopped, one and one-half cups milk, one teaspoonful soda, sifted in three cups flour. Bake in muffin pans. Bake in muffin pans. MRS. A. L. S.

Christmns Remembering

Remember to make the day brighter for some one who without your thought would know no Christmas. Remember the lonely. There is no time in the year when loneliness has the power to hurt as at the joyous Christmastide.

Remember the bereft. Sad memories are doubly hard on this festal day when unshared by sympathizing friends.
Remember the sick. Those who must spend their Christmas in suffering need all the consolation that the thoughtfulness of the strong can yield.
Remember the poor. Even if you have modern theories on glving and pauperizing waive them for Christmas. Besides the true Christmas giving is not charity, but love.

the true Christmas giving is not charity, but love.

Remember the hospitals, the homes for the aged and the institutions for orphans. All these organizations need your help if Christmas is to be a red letter day for the inmates.

Remember even the jalls. We believe nowadays in helping the wrongdoer to rise above his misdeeds, and never is he more susceptible to the humanizing power of a kind thought than when Christmas must be passed in a cell.

Remember the children, not your children only, but those whose Christmas day wil not measure up to the joy that is the lawful heritage of child-hood.

The Unfortunate Cherub

Once, when I was just a boy, A-bubblin' up an' down with joy, I cut my finger deep by jing, An' jagged like as anything; All way down into the bone. So they was two stitches sewn By the doctor—an' ma said Enny other boy'd been dead!

Hurt so much at first 'at I
Just couldn't he'p a-havin' a cry;
But next day at school, by gee,
Weren't no one as big as me;
Had a great big bandaged hand.
'N every girl 'ud come an' stand
'N want to see the rag took off—
'N then they'd say 'Oh, my!" an' cough.

Them was moments proud and fine When I showed that wound uv mine; Never was a boy in town Had a cut 'at went clean down 'Through the flesh an' in the bone, Where two stitches had been sewn, An, their mother called 'em brave An' said they'd just escaped the grave!

was hero up an' down 'he length an' breadth of that old the length an oreauth of that of town;
The kids all called me lucky chap,
An' some uv 'em took off their cap
An' stood aroun' to wince each day
When I was showin' off that way;
An' every feller tried to see
How much unfort'nater he could be!

Ah, them old childish idees seem
So far away in mist an' dream!
An' yet, somehow it's all the same
With grown-up folk a'seekin' fame,
Or seekin' pity or renown
By showin' off aroun' the town,
An' layin' their wounds, with mournful face,
Wide open in the market place.

Much latitude in the shape and size of opera bags is permissible, but the materials used must be of the best, whether the effect aimed for be daintiness or richness.

Two yards of ribbon, four and a half or five inches wide, will make an opera bag large enough to hold glasses, purse, handkerchief, and fan.

The ribbon is out into three strlps of equal length, which are overhanded to-

The piece thus formed is folded as for a straight bag and overhanded together to within two inches of the top. To form a frill the top is turned in two inches and gathered, leaving an inch plain at each end.

A unique feature of this bag is the handles, which are sewed inside when the frill is gathered, and which are made of featherbone covered with white satin.

Cut a strip of featherbone fourteen inches long and lap one end over the other, sew securely, thus forming a ring, which is covered by winding with No. 2 ribbon.

Each handle is finished with a fluffy bow of the ribbon tied on one side of top.

The bow on one should be on the opposite side from the other, so that when the handles are held together for carrying there will be a bow each side of the top. for a straight bag and overhanded to-ing there will be a bow each side of the ing there will be a bow each side of the top.

Five yards of No. 2 ribbon are required for winding and bows.

The bottom of the bag is made square, something the shape of an ordinary paper bag, by folding the lower end of each seam into a point that will come to the middle of the bottom of the bag, where the two points meet and are sewed together and to the bag.

A yard and a quarter of five-inch ribbon cut into four strips instead of three, but made in the same way, forms a smaller bag, that many people would prefer to the larger.

The usual foundation for these is circles of white bread about the size of a silver dollar, fried in butter to a delicate brown on each side. After frying, lay on a soft paper to absorb every particle of grease. To serve six people, cut twelve selected oysters in small plees and mix with two tablespoonfuls horseradish, one heaping tablespoonful each chopped green cucumber pickles and olives, and season with lemon juice and paprika. When it toast is cold, spread with the mixture, cover with mayonnaise made with lemon juice instead of vinegar, and serve cold.

wives, and they will do so all the more when they see that other people admire them, too. The untidy, dowdy woman may have solid virtues, but one has to remember the fact as an excuse for her appearance, and the man who is mentally apologizing for his wife's shortcomings is in danger of finding some one else more attractive than she is.

It is a mistake of young wives to drop their old friends and expect their husbands to do the same. The married lovers may, for a short time, be intensely happy in each other's society, but sooner or later outside interests will be missed, and if happiness is to continue they must both mix with their fellows and take their share in the pleasures and the work of the world. Wider interests will not make either less fond of the other, and the woman who wants to keep her husband's love will never do so by tying him to spend all the time he can spare from his business within the four walls of home.

These fiaring, rippling overdraperies offer a great contrast to the flat panel-ted effect of coats and skirts which tailors are at present developing.

The leading dressmakers are recommending the draperies with 11 pleated and gathered frills, or ruched or shirred trimmings whereas tallors affect the paneled skirt and coat, because they provide so many handsome opportunities for hand embroideries, for fancy braiding and for the introduction of cloth and fancy buttons.
